

L3Harris is also working to qualify a modern version of the engine known as the RL10C-X that will include major components built using 3D printing technology.